Dear Mr. Jenkins,

I'm interested in applying for the web developer position with Cadence Web Design Inc. In my previous position, I optimized websites for over 40 clients and successfully increased user satisfaction by up to 55%. I hope to bring my web development and user experience (UX) design background to your organization in this role.

Your company's reputation for its innovative and creative web development solutions is what excites me about this opportunity. With two years of experience working with medium-sized businesses, I can deliver valuable contributions to help refine the UX and drive customer success. Some of my previous accomplishments include:

- Collaborated with a team of web developers to develop and maintain websites and applications for over 40 clients with a retention rate of 98%
- Tested and fixed bugs, optimized website functionality, and reduced error tickets by 50%
- Developed creative and innovative solutions that increased customer reach by an average of 40% while meeting both deadline and budget demands

I look forward to telling you more about how my expertise in UX design and web development could be a strong asset to your team. Feel free to contact me via phone or email for any questions you might have about my background. Thank you for your consideration.

Best regards,

John Bergsen
